Medical writing is fast becoming a sought-after career considering its criticality in the Pharmaceutical Industry. More so because regulatory agencies today need substantial documentation as per the review measures. The demand for skilled regulatory medical writers has increased tremendously. Many large companies and MNCs have created regulatory medical writing hubs in India.

The pharmaceutical industry is involved in the research, development, production, and commercialization of medicines & therapeutic interventions. The market is experiencing significant growth and reached a worldwide revenue of 1.42 trillion U.S. dollars in 2021. Medical Writing, as a professional field, is set to high grow rate between 2019 and 2029. The industry is always on the lookout for able medical writers who have an understanding of medical concepts and terminologies. They must be aware of and follow relevant guidelines and have strong analytical sense to handle and represent research data.

Medical writing involves generating elaborate scientific documents that include clinical research documents, content for healthcare websites, health magazines, journals and news. Medical writing can be classified into two types: Regulatory medical writing and Educational medical writing. As a Medical Writer, one gets to know and work with pharmaceuticals, medical devices, clinical research, hospitals, and the healthcare industry.

GAADS, an Ed-Tech company offering job-oriented courses and is committed to help students prepare for the career challenges ahead. The courses are in-tune with the latest industry demands and they guide students on path to their bright professional life. Training courses help emboldened the mindset of students as they explore their careers outside the educational institutes.

The courses are aimed at making education affordable, flexible, and industry-oriented. The course material is created after an in-depth analysis of the subject at hand. GAADS provides high-quality training for medical writers through online learning, online workshops, and assignments. All online workshops are taught by industry experts and leaders with hands-on expertise in the topic.

The webinar will be focused on:

- Medical writing as a career
- Who can opt for it?
- What are the qualifications and industry requirements?
- What are the top companies looking for?
- How to prepare?

So, if you are a graduate in Pharmacy, Life Sciences, or Medicine or a student/content writer interested in writing about medical and scientific information, here's your chance to explore a career path. It will help you to work in pharmaceuticals, medical devices, clinical research, hospitals, and the healthcare industry. To Register for the FREE WEBINAR visit this link <https://gaads.in/webinars>
